

Adaptive leadership for equitable community impact.

Applications now open for the National Leadership Academy for The Public's Health (NLAPH)

Effective, principled leadership is more important than ever. Your community needs leaders who can assess complex, intersecting issues, such as COVID-19 and violence. They deserve leaders who can work as a team and move from strategy to implementation, in partnership with the community, and center health equity and racial justice.

Multi-sector teams are now invited to apply to NLAPH and transform their collective impact. Get the training and tools to respond more effectively to today's needs and meet tomorrow's challenges.

What is NLAPH?

Since 2012, NLAPH has helped teams with members from diverse sectors including health, housing, education, transportation, and law enforcement to grow individual leaders into a collective leadership team better suited to address today's complex issues and effectively transform their communities, improve health, and advance equity.

With NLAPH, you will develop high-performing team leadership skills around assessment, communication, policy development, and advancing equity while working on an issue that is already a priority in your community through an Applied Health Leadership Project. You will experience first-hand how team leadership multiplies the potential to advance health equity beyond what each individual could achieve on their own.

"We [had] all been doing duplicative and non-cost effective work. People were going to each other's meetings, but then going back inside their own walls and doing their own thing. But [now] we're changing that...we believe that we will make an impact...by aligning resources in a way that has never been done before."

- NLAPH Cohort 3 (2014) Fellow

How does NLAPH benefit me?

As an NLAPH fellow, you will receive training and support to increase mastery of individual and team leadership skills in order to increase your impact in the community. Our evidence-based program will help you:

- Develop the necessary leadership skills to navigate uncertainty and manage change.
- Work more effectively with multi-sector partners.
- Learn how to use data to tell your story, plan, evaluate, and monitor impact.
- Refine systems and processes with Continuous Quality Improvement (CQI).
- Co-design programmatic and policy solutions in collaboration with community members.
- Communicate your impact and influence policymakers.
- Create sustainable change.

How does NLAPH address the unique needs and issues in my community?

You apply to NLAPH to advance work that is already a priority in your community. The program is designed to use your community work as your learning ground—all content and tools will be applied to this project.

NLAPH centers your community's core values and needs within the program, building a focus on advancing equity.

How is NLAPH funded?

NLAPH is operated by the Center for Health Leadership and Practice, a center of the Public Health Institute, and is funded by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

How long does the program run?

NLAPH program elements begin November 2021 and run through October 2022.

What are the eligibility requirements?

- Must be a multi-sector team of four individuals.
- Teams should be from an existing coalition or working group already engaged in addressing a community priority.
- One team member must be from the public health department.
- Team members should include multi-sector leaders who can help advance the group's goals.

What is the commitment?

- Participation in the launch webinar on November 18, 2021
- Participation in a three-day leadership retreat from March 1-3, 2022
- Minimum 8 hours each month for learning opportunities

What is the cost for my team to participate?

Participation in NLAPH is free, including team coaching, retreat, access to all program materials and webinars, and enrollment in the Leadership Learning Network (LLN) after completion of the program.

When are applications due?

All applications must be submitted by 5pm PT on Friday, October 1, 2021.
